

FRIDAY 24TH OCTOBER 2025

MILWARDS PRIMARY SCHOOL AND NURSERY NEWSLETTER

Dear Parents/Carers,

As I walked around the school today visiting each class to award Star of the Week, we all reflected on what a long half term it has been. In all my years working in education, there haven't been many occasions where we've had an eight-week half term — so I think it's fair to say that the children have truly earned a well-deserved rest next week!

Next half term promises to be a busy one, filled with performances, celebrations and festive activities. With the weather turning colder, I fully expect to see coats, hats, gloves and scarves being worn when the children return.

We had fantastic support at our Reading Café this week, and I'd like to say a big thank you to all who were able to attend and support the event. I'm also delighted to share that our Book Fair was our most successful yet, with over £1,000 in sales. This means the school will receive £500 worth of new books for our classrooms and book corners — a wonderful boost for our young readers. A big thank you goes out to Ms Alcock for organising the event which has rightly become a regular fixture in the calendar.

The children also had a brilliant time at the Halloween Disco, and it was lovely to round off the half term with singing, dancing, and a little sprinkling of magic!

A polite reminder that only service dogs are permitted on the school site. Dogs — including those being carried — are not allowed on school grounds.

We also kindly ask that scooters and bicycles are not ridden anywhere on the school premises.

Thank you for your cooperation and support in helping us keep everyone safe.

Finally, in the sporting arena, Milwards pupils represented the school at the Boccia event hosted by Passmores Academy. As always, they did us proud — showing great teamwork, enthusiasm and excellent sportsmanship throughout. Our Year 5 team took home a silver medal – well done to you.

All that is left for me to say is have a lovely week next week, let's hope that we get some nice weather. We look forward to seeing you back on Monday 3rd November at the normal start time.

Kind regards,

Mr M Doughty

SAFETY ON SOCIAL MEDIA

Currently, children are growing up in an immediate and throwaway culture when it comes to content that's consumed online. So much material is now deliberately created to be shorter in nature – and may often contain hidden elements such as advertising, or extreme political and cultural views. With complex algorithms built to keep people on their phones and engaging with social media content, it's becoming increasingly difficult to reduce time spent on these platforms.

1 REDUCE DOOMSCROLLING

It's controversially common for young people to spend hours 'doomscrolling' – browsing through social media and aimlessly viewing every post they see, many of which might make them feel sad or anxious. Social media can be useful for keeping in touch with friends and family, as well as staying up to date on current events. However, it's important to use it with a clear purpose, instead of endlessly scrolling through content, which could lead to young people accidentally discovering harmful material.

2 TALK ABOUT THE CONTENT

It's important to keep abreast of the kind of content that a young person is being exposed to. Discussing what they're watching online can help you understand why they're using social media in the first place. Furthermore, ensure that children are aware of hidden content, such as advertising of a product – and that they know how to spot that the creator is being paid to talk about it.

3 FIND POSITIVE ASPECTS

Despite all the concerns, there's plenty of wholesome content on social media, it's worth spending time with children to help them find something suitable and enjoyable. Perhaps you'll even discover a joint interest, and you can enjoy the content alongside the child. As part of this, you should also point out why certain things shouldn't be given attention, explaining why it isn't suitable and why it's been created in the first place.

4 REDUCE SCREEN TIME

Young people can sometimes be unaware of the exact amount of time they spend looking at social media. Smart phones don't just have the capacity to monitor screen time; they also record how much time is spent on each app. Consider setting targets to reduce this and support children to meet these goals, gradually reducing the amount of time spent on different apps.

5 FILL THE VOID

Monitoring and reducing screen time can create a lot of free time to fill, and young people can even face withdrawal symptoms when asked to step away from their phones. To mitigate this, consider what offline activities you could introduce the child to, and what they would enjoy. This can ensure that young users will progressively cut down on their screen time, rather than temporarily doing so while they know it's being monitored.

6 REDUCE NOTIFICATIONS

One way in which social media platforms keep people coming back is through notifications. The algorithms behind these apps track people's daily habits, including the times of the day where they're most likely to engage with the platform. This data is then used to deliver specifically timed notifications to draw their back in. To avoid young users being exposed to this tactic, simply turn off notifications for the app in their phone's settings.

7 LIVE IN THE REAL WORLD

Overexposure to social media can distort someone's perception of the real world – from body norms to social conventions. This filtered environment can make it hard for young people to distinguish reality from online content, which is now becoming even more difficult with the rise of AI. To mitigate this concern, take time to teach young people how to discern truth from fiction, both on and off social media.

8 DIGITAL DETOX

Encouraging young people to take a 'digital detox' – turn even just a couple of the apps that they use, can result in an overall reduction of screen time and less exposure to potentially harmful content. Alternatively, rather than uninstalling the app entirely, encourage children to take a 'digital detox' from content creators and influencers, and instead, keep in touch with friends and family – which is generally a far healthier use of these platforms.

9 MODEL GOOD BEHAVIOUR

Consider the habits that you're demonstrating to your children. How much time do you spend on your phone? How much do you 'doomscroll'? Comparing your own usage with the child's could put things into perspective for them – or if it turns out that you're also consuming social media, it can turn a screen time reduction into a joint mission, which you and the child can work on together.

10 BE CLEAR ON THE "WHY"

Research shows that young people can become addicted to social media. There are many schools that are moving towards using phone free due to the negative impacts of using social media and phone connectivity. It's important to explain to young people why managing screen time is important, set out the benefits, and ensure they have all the relevant information, so it's not just seen as a punishment.
